SEAL ARBITRATION.

A Basis For Conference Outlined by Blaine.

STRONG DIPLOMATIC ARGUMENT.

England Has Exercised a Right Similar to that Claimed By the United States. Canada Should Pay For Stolen Seals.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Secretary Blaine this evening made public his latest communication on the Behring sea matter. It is addressed to Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British minister, and reads as follows:

SIR—The modifications which Lord Salisbury suggests in the questions for arbitration do not wholly meet the views of the president, but the president changes the text of the third and fifth in such a manner as he has hoped, will result in an agreement between the two governments. While Lord Salisbury suggests a different mode of procedure from that embodied in the sixth question, the president does not understand him actually to object to the question and he therefore assumes that it is agreed to. The six questions as now proposed by the president are as follows:

First—What exclusive jurisdiction in the sea now known as the Behring sea, and what exclusive rights in the seal fisheries therein, did Russia assert and exercise prior and up to the time of the cession of Alaska to the United States?

Second—How far were these claims of jurisdiction as to the seal fisheries recognized and conceded by Great Britain?

Third—Was the body of water now known as the Behring sea included in the phrase "Pacific ocean" as used in the treaty of 1825 between Great Britain and Russia; and what rights, if any, in the Behring sea were held and exclusively exercised by Russia after said treaty.

Fourth—Did not all the rights of Russia as to jurisdiction and as to the seal fisheries in Behring sea, east of the water boundary described in the treaty between the United States and Russia, of March 30, 1867, pass unimpaired to the United States under that treaty?

Fifth—Has the United States any right, and if so, what right, of protection or property in the fur seals frequenting the islands of the United States in Behring sea when such seals are found outside the ordinary three-mile limit?

Sixth—If the determination of the foregoing questions shall leave the subject in such position that the concurrence of Great Britain is necessary in prescribing regulations for the killing of the fur seal in any part of the waters of Behring sea; then it shall be further determined: First—How far, if at all, outside the ordinary territorial limits it is necessary that the United States should exercise an exclusive jurisdiction, in order to protect the seal for the time on the island of the United States and feeding therefrom. Second—Whether a closed season (during which the killing of seals in the waters of the Behring sea outside the ordinary territorial limits shall be prohibited) is necessary to give the seal fishing industry, so valuable and important to mankind, from deterioration or destruction, and if so, Third—What months or parts of months should be included in such season, and over what waters it should extend.

The president does not object to the additional question regarding claims for damages to English ships proposed by Lord Salisbury, if one condition can be added, namely: That after the issues of the arbitration are defined, if the United States shall prevail, all the seals taken by Canadian vessels during the period shall be paid for at the ordinary price for which skins are sold. This seems to be the complement of Lord Salisbury's proposition, and he doubtless will find it will secure his lordship's assent. In the first paragraph of Lord Salisbury's dispatch of Feb. 21 he makes the following declaration: "It is now quite clear that the advisers of the president do not claim Behring sea as 'mare clausum,' and, indeed, that they repudiate that contention in express terms."

Lord Salisbury's expression is put in such form as to imply (whether he so intended I know not) that the United States has hitherto been resting in contention upon the fact that the Behring sea was "mare clausum." If that was his intention it would have been well for his lordship to specify wherein the United States ever made the assertion. The emphatic denial in my dispatch of Dec. 17, last, was intended to put an end to the iteration of the charge and to eliminate it from the current discussion.

Lord Salisbury complains that I did not deal with certain protests, written by Lord Londonderry and the Duke of Wellington in 1827, which he had before quoted. If he will recur to the 26th and 27th pages of my dispatch of December 17 he will observe that I specially dealt with these; that I maintained and I think, proved from the text, that there was not a single word in those protests referring to the Behring sea, but that they referred in the language of the Duke of Wellington of the 17th of October, 1827, only to the lands extending along the shores of the Pacific ocean from latitude 49 degrees to latitude 60 degrees north.

In the first paragraph of Lord Londonderry's protest of January 18, 1827, addressed to Count Lieven, of Russia, he alluded to the matters in dispute as "especially connected with the territorial rights of the Russian crown on the northwest coast of America, bordering on the Pacific ocean, and the commerce and navigation of his imperial majesty's subjects in the seas adjacent thereto." From these and other pertinent facts it is evident that the protests of Lord Londonderry and the duke of Wellington had nothing whatever to do with the points now in issue between the American and British governments concerning the waters of the Behring sea. They both referred in different but substantially identical phrases, to the territory south of the Alaskan peninsula bordering on the Pacific and geographically shut out from the Behring sea. I regret that my arguments on a point which Lord Salisbury considers of great importance should have escaped his lordship's notice.

In Lord Salisbury's judgment the contention of the United States now rests wholly upon the ukase of 1821, by the Emperor Alexander I, of Russia. The United States has at no time rested its argument solely on the ground mentioned, and this government regrets that Lord Salisbury should have so misapprehended the American position as to limit its basis of right in Behring sea to the ukase of 1821. The United States has, among other grounds insisted without recurring to any of its inherited and superior rights in Alaska, that the government has as full authority for going beyond the three mile line in case of proved necessity as Great Britain possesses. Two or three instances of the power which Great Britain exercises beyond the three mile line have already been quoted, but have failed thus far to secure comment or explanation from Lord Salisbury. Another case can be added, which, perhaps, is still more to the point. In 1889, only two years ago, the British parliament enacted a law, the effect of which is fully shown by a map inclosed herewith. Far outside the three-mile line the parliament of Great Britain has attempted to control a body of water situated beyond the northern section of Scotland, 2,000 square miles in extent, and to direct that certain methods of fishing shall not be used within that great body of water under a specified penalty. It will be observed that the prohibition is not alone against British subjects, but against "any person." I here quote the pertinent section of the parliamentary act in question:

"6. The fishing board may by by-law or by laws direct that the methods of fishing known as long trawling and otter trawling shall not be used within a line drawn from Duncansby head, in Caithness, to Rattray Point, in Aberdeenshire, or within such area or limits as shall be defined in such by-law, and may from time to time make, alter and revoke by-laws for the purposes of this act, no such by-law shall be of any validity until it has been confirmed by the secretary for Scotland.

2. Any person who uses any such method of fishing in contravention of any such by-law shall be liable, on conviction under the summary jurisdiction (Scotland) act, to a fine not exceeding £5 for the first offense, and not exceeding £20 for the second or any subsequent offense, and every net, set or engine to be used, in contravention of any by-law may be seized and destroyed or otherwise disposed of as in the sixth section of this act mentioned.

If Great Britain may thus control an area of two thousand and seven hundred square miles on the coast of Scotland, why may not the United States preserve a space around the Pribyloff island in which similar prohibitions may be enforced?

The following would be the needed legislation for such a purpose by congress and it is but the paraphrase of the act of parliament.

The fur seal board may, by by-law or by-laws, direct that the methods of sealing known as spearing, or harpooning, or with firearms, shall not be used within a line drawn from the shores of the Pribyloff islands, sixty miles in the Behring sea, and said board may from time to time make, alter, and revoke by-laws for the purposes of this section, but no such by-law shall be of any validity until it has been confirmed by the secretary of the treasury.

Second—Any person who uses any such method of sealing or in contravention of such by-law shall be liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $500 for the first offense and not exceeding $500 for the second or any subsequent offense, and every spear, harpoon or firearm attempted to be used in contravention of any such by-law may be seized and destroyed or otherwise disposed of as said fur seal board may direct.

It must not escape observation that the area of water outside the three mile line on the coast of Scotland whose control is assumed by Great Britain, is as large as would be found inside a line drawn from Cape Cod to Portland Harbor, on the New England coast.

Lord Salisbury reasserts his contention that the words "Pacific ocean," at the time of the treaty between Russia and Great Britain, did include Behring sea. Undoubtedly the Pacific ocean includes Behring sea in the same sense that the Atlantic ocean includes the Gulf of Mexico, and yet it would be regarded as a very inaccurate statement to say that the Mississippi river flows into the Atlantic ocean. I think Lord Salisbury fails to recognize the common distinction between the "Atlantic ocean" and the "waters of the Atlantic," while the Mexican gulf is not a part of the Atlantic ocean, it would, I am sure, comport with general usage to say that it belongs to the waters of the Atlantic, and while Behring sea is not technically a part of the Pacific ocean it would undoubtedly belong to the waters of the Pacific ocean.

The English Channel would not ordinarily be understood as included in the term "Atlantic ocean." One would not say that Dover or Calais is on the coast of the Atlantic ocean, and yet clearly the English channel belongs to the waters of the Atlantic. In point of fact, therefore, according to the usage of the word there is no dispute of any consequence between the two governments on the geographical point under consideration. The historical point is the one at issue. The explanatory note from Russia, filed in the state department of this country, specially referred to in Mr. John Quincy Adams' diary, and quoted in my note of December 17, 1890, plainly draws a distinction between the Pacific ocean on the one hand, and the "Sea of Okhotsk, the Sea of Kamtatka and the Icy sea," on the other, and so long as Russia did that distinction must apply to, and must absolutely decide, all the contentions between the two countries as far as the waters of the Behring sea are concerned. To discuss this point further would, in the opinion of the president, contribute nothing of value to the general contention. In the opinion of the president Lord Salisbury is wholly and strangely in error in making the following statement: Nor do they (the advisers of the president) rely, as a justification for the seizure of British ships in the open sea, upon the contention that the interests of the seal fisheries give to the United States government any right for that purpose, which, according to international law, it would not otherwise possess." The government of the United States has steadily held just the reverse of the position which Lord Salisbury has imputed to it. It holds that the ownership of the islands upon which the seals breed, that the habit of the seals in regularly resorting thither and rearing their young thereon, that their going out from the islands in search of food and regularly returning thereto, and all the facts and incidents of their relation to the island, give to the United States a property interest therein; that their property interest was claimed and exercised by Russia during the whole period of its sovereignty, over the land and waters of Alaska; that England recognized this property interest so far as recognition is implied abstaining from all interference with it during the whole period of Russia's ownership of Alaska and during the first nineteen years of the sovereignty of the United States. It is yet to be determined whether the behest intrusion of Canadian vessels in 1886 and subsequent years has changed the law and equity of the case theretofore prevailing.

I have the honor to be, with the highest consideration, sir,

Your most obedient servant,
JAMES G. BLAINE.

The British to Blame.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 7.—The Chronicle states that it has information that gives ground for the statement that the steamer seen hovering around the entrance of San Diego harbor is the armed transport Imperiale, now in possession of Balmaceda's party. She left Valparaiso to intercept the Itata on her return voyage to Iquique. The Imperiale is a vessel of 2000 tons, and is said to be capable of steaming sixteen miles per hour.

Juan Cisternas, former Chilian consul, said yesterday: "It will be found that British money is the mainstay of the insurgents against our government. The British want to obtain control of the nitrate deposits and President Balmaceda wished them to be worked for the benefit of the Chilian government."

The Lynched Italians.

NEW ORLEANS, May 7.—Signor Corte, the Italian consul here, to-day addressed a letter to the grand jury and District Attorney Grant in reference to the citizenship of the lynched Italians. Signor Corte claims that he can prove that but two of the men were citizens of the United States and that the registration papers of some appear to have been signed by them when they did not know how to write. This is important, as it will no doubt, be a basis for any action the Italian government may take to recover damages, should such a course be contemplated.

The Koch Lymph.

NEW YORK, May 7.—At a meeting of the New York Academy of Medicine to-night the physicians who have been experimenting with Koch's lymph for some time submitted the results of their investigations. Dr. Loomis summed up all the reports thus: "In the lymph we have an agent which will do good and may do great harm. We consider that it requires care in its use as well as more experience with it. I am fully of the opinion that it is going to take a prominent place in the treatment of tuberculosis and that it is going to save more lives imperiled by that disease than any other agent. Still it may kill more than it saves if we do not be careful."

Weather Bureau.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—For Colorado: Showers, slightly cooler, except stationary temperature in extreme west portion; warmer in extreme east portion; fresh southerly winds, becoming variable.

CHILIAN PRIVATEER.

Marbled Speckledy's Story of His Capture and Release.

SUDDEN CHANGE IN A SCHOONER

Steel Cannon Brought From a Hold Full of Contraband Goods. The Charleston Will Start in Pursuit This Evening.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 7.—The Chronicle's special from San Diego says: Deputy Marshal Speckledy, who was forced off by the Itata, arrived here this morning. His statement makes sensational reading and from all circumstances surrounding the case the Itata is nothing more or less than a pirate in the service of the Chilian rebels. Deputy Marshal Sims tells the story of the occurrence as follows:

Nothing unusual occurred until Wednesday, when a boat containing First Mate Nelson, the surgeon with a medicine chest, and two passengers came to us. As soon as the passengers landed from the boat, one of the men had a short conversation with the captain. I was at that time in the dining room; five minutes later I found to my surprise that the steamer was under a full head of steam and making for the ocean.

The captain came in a minute later, and invited me to his cabin, offering me a chair, and a second later he was joined by some of the passengers. They exhibited a revolver and asked me if I was armed. The captain acting as spokesman said: "Well, I have contraband goods on board, and this is life or death with me." Then pointing his finger to his throat he said, this is what it means.

He then called two of the Chilian crew who stood guard by the door, each armed. He then told me not to be alarmed, but if I went out of the cabin during his absence he would not be responsible for the result. About this time I noticed them lifting out of a hold four steel cannon, which they placed in position on the upper deck, after which they were loaded in my presence. Returning a few minutes later, the captain said: "I have spoken to the pilot, and instead of putting you off at Point Lomax in one of our boats, we will get a boat from a pilot at the last point." Around on the deck were 100 Chilians, all armed to the teeth, each having a repeating rifle, and most of them dressed in uniform. The captain gave a sickly laugh and said: "We have changed into a man-of-war."

By this time we were near the entrance of the harbor, and the captain gave orders to put over a boat and to the pilot to step in, and escorting me to the ladder, said: "You must excuse me for putting you to this annoyance." Then I was lowered over the side and the Itata passed out of the bay, heading north."

The Alta Californian has positive information that the U. S. S. Charleston will sail for San Diego to-morrow in pursuit of the Chilian ship Itata. Secretary Tracy telegraphed special orders to-day and the Charleston left Mare Island to-day and anchored off San Francisco instead of taking her usual anchorage and went behind Goat island out of sight. Her officers have orders to be coaling down is to go outside and try her guns. The officers and men have been ordered to be on board at 8 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The Chilian Privateer.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The treasury department officials are being kept fully informed of the movements of the Chilian vessel Itata, which escaped from the port of San Diego, Cala., yesterday after being seized by the marshal, and of the fruitless chase for the schooner Robert and Minnie. They refuse, however, to make public any of the dispatches that have been received from the collector, or that have been sent to him. Secretary Tracy said if he knew anything about the matter, intimated that it was out of the jurisdiction of his office and was now with the attorney general. The attorney general also declined to say anything on the subject for publication.

Fighting in Honduras.

LA LIBERTAD, Salvator, May 7.—Advices received here from Honduras state that at 3 o'clock yesterday morning a force under the command of Colonel Melina and General Bardales, both of which officers are leading rebels, made an attack upon the cuartel at Amapala. The guard there was taken by surprise and the rebels were soon in possession of the cuartel. The government troops were immediately summoned and a force comprising 600 men, under command of Colonel Barrera made a movement against the cuartel. Severe fighting followed, but at noon the government troops had succeeded in driving the rebels from the cuartel, inflicting great loss upon them. Among the killed was General Bardales, one of the rebel leaders. Amalapa is situated upon the island of that name, and the rebels were driven to the main land. Colonel Barrera has a force of 300 infantry and forty cavalry guarding the island. The rebels are besieging the place evidently intend to make another attack as soon as the reinforcements which they expect arrive.

The Rio Grande Floods.

EL PASO, Tex., May 7.—There is no perceptible change either for worse or better in the flood today, and it is believed that the river will rise no higher. Last night the waters flooded the engine room of the El Paso water works but is not yet deep enough to stop the engine. The flooded portion of the city known as the lowlands or Mexican town presents a scene of complete destruction. Some 1000 poor Mexican laborers and Mexican street peddlers lived in the flooded district, and in many instances they had their entire possessions swept away, only a few succeed in saving all of their household effects. They lived in small adobe jacals and these have crumbled down.

A Discourteous Consul.

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 7.—Fresh fuel is added to the Consul Ewing scandal by a statement made by the American consular agent. He says: "At no time have I ever refused to honor the toast to her majesty, the queen, nor do I refuse to toast the sovereign of another nation to which I am accredited, but what I did decline to do was to stand up and by so standing up, participate in the singing of any national anthem other than the United States. To do otherwise would be contrary to diplomatic usages."

Results of a Strike.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 7.—The far-reaching effects of the strike among the coke burners at Connellsville, Pa., is being seriously felt in Milwaukee, eighteen out of the nineteen furnaces of the Illinois Steel Works company have been blown out as the result of the strike in Pennsylvania. The company consumes 300 carloads of coke a day and the officials state that they are unable to secure any further shipments, thus throwing out of employment a large number of men.

Phebe Couzins' Suit.

CHICAGO, May 7.—Edwin Walker, attorney for the board of control, and all the parties named in Miss Phebe Couzins' suit to retain her position as secretary of the board of lady managers, filed an answer to the Couzins bill to-day. Mr. Walker goes over the entire case and says that she "grossly distorted" the minutes of the November session.

Crops are Good.

ATCHISON, Kan., May 7.—J. W. Orr, assistant general attorney of the Missouri Pacific, who has traveled extensively this week in the interior portions of Kansas and Nebraska, says that there is more talk than truth in the report of damage which at its worst never was very bad. He says the prospect was never better and the farmers never more hopeful. Here and there the Hessian fly is working, but doing very little damage. Occasionally there are spots of yellow wheat in the fields of other low places where water has stood and killed the plants, but these places are an insignificant part of the vast area of the country that is planted in wheat, and with a reasonable weather until harvest time the yield will be unprecedented in the history of the two states.

The Presidential Party.

POCATELLO, Ore., May 7.—The presidential party came down from Pocatello, the usual stop being made for the night at 7.15 over the Union Pacific.

PORTLAND, Ore., May 7.—The presidential party arrived in Portland at 7 o'clock this afternoon after a stay of several hours. Through the small towns along the Columbia and Umatilla river stopping at several small stations where short stops were made, the president held receptions. At Arlington the local military company paraded, and a large number of persons shook the president's hand. The train from Pendleton here half an hour. More than 100 Indian bucks and squaws from the Umatilla reservation crowded on horses and dressed in their gayest blankets, participated in the reception.

The school children of the town and the local military company were also on hand. A decorated platform had been built beside the track and as the president took his place on this a cheer went up from the thousands of throats. Mayor Rich made an address of welcome and the president responded happily, expressing his surprise that so large a crowd had gathered to welcome him. Mr. Wanamaker also made an address and Mrs. Harrison and the ladies of the party were introduced. Chief Yeel-Lana-Yawtz, of the Umatillas, was introduced and made a speech complaining that the white men had broken their pledge of peace and had taken land from his people, and other chiefs also spoke, and the president promised to look into the matter on his return to Washington.

BAKER CITY, Ore., May 8.—A royal reception was given the president at La Grande, where his train arrived at 9 o'clock last night. Thousands of people were at the station, salutes were fired, steam whistles blown and the local militia turned out headed by bands. The train passed through here at 10.45 p. m. and the president was given a cordial welcome. Shortly after 1 o'clock this morning the train entered Idaho.

An Italian's Opinion.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Regarding the grand jury report in New Orleans M. Contenchi, president of the Italian chamber of commerce in this city, says: "I don't consider that the character of the men, their past lives and records, criminal or otherwise, has anything to do with the question over which Mr. Blaine and the Marquis di Rudinì have been sticking. I think they had better drop the matter now. I think we had all better drop it. That is the best thing that can come of that everlastingly bad business."

One crime does not justify another, and respect for the law is never inculcated by an exhibition of lawlessness. New Orleans was disgraced when the assassins of Chief Hennessey were not convicted. She was disgraced when her motionless were allowed to become murderers, though the authorities had plenty of time and ample power to interfere and prevent the crimes had they been so disposed, and now the City of New Orleans is disgraced again by the action of her grand jury, which has not had the saving grace to come out and say, as the civilized world has said:

"These lynchers were murderers; they were not good citizens, and they have robbed our city of its fair fame the world over."

Harvester Companies Consolidate.

CHICAGO, May 7.—The terms of the purchase of the Moline Plow company, the Deere & Manour company and the Deere & Co. harvester works, all of Moline, Ill., have been agreed upon. They also completed at a meeting of the parties in interest in this city yesterday. The capital of the consolidation will, it is said, be $3,000,000. It will manufacture all kinds of farm machinery and prices, it is claimed, will be reduced. The main part of the plant will be located at Moline, but there will also be a branch establishment near Chicago.

A Laudable Purpose.

BOSTON, May 7.—All the Italians in Boston are invited to attend a mass meeting at Faneuil hall to-morrow night which it is announced is for the purpose of forming a society for the elevation of the poorer and ignorant class of Italians, to whom it is proposed to teach respect for and obedience to the laws of this country. The projectors also state that in time they will ask the city to make laws to prohibit rag and garbage picking hand organ grinding, etc., which are chiefly carried on by Italians.

Italian Humane.

BOSTON, May 7.—Mr. W. R. Russel of Newton received a cable gram from Florence last night stating that the first report of the injuries to Mr. Jacques and a member of his family had been very much exaggerated and that they were not indicated in the cable message. Dominick Maggio, president of the Boston Italian Republican club, says that he feels sure that this could be the work only of the hoodlum and hot-blooded element. Such an attack on innocent Americans would not, he knew, have the slightest sympathy among the educated Italians either in the mother country or here in America.

A Disastrous Wreck.

COLUMBUS, O., May 7.—A disastrous wreck occurred on the Panhandle railroad four miles west of Tennyson, O., at 11 o'clock this morning, being a collision between the limited mail No. 17, west, and passenger No. 10, east. Daniel Longnecker, of Columbus, baggage master on No. 10, was instantly killed. Express Messenger Marvin was badly bruised and Postal Clerks C. P. Rogers, Samuel Veach and one Miller, all in the first car, were more or less injured internally, as well as bruised about the body and limbs.

A Late Frost.

ST. LOUIS, May 7.—Dispatches from many points in Missouri indicate that the cold snap has been quite general in character and that the fruit crop and garden truck have been badly injured by the frost. In some cases entire fields of melons were destroyed and farmers are replanting.

TELEGRAPH BREVITIES.

The strike is spreading in Belgium, and about one hundred thousand are now out.

A dispatch from San Diego says the United States man-of-war Omaha arrived there late evening from the Asiatic squadron.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Telegraph says that Rudini has signed a renewal of the triple alliance for five years.

The London Chronicle says that the comparison by Mr. Blaine of the Behring sea difficulty to the Morny case is farcical, as the cases are widely dissimilar.

The Iowa Republican state central committee has issued a call for a state convention to nominate a gubernatorial ticket to meet at Cedar Rapids, July 10.

A dispatch from Valparaiso says an attempt has been made at Santiago to assassinate leading members of Balmaceda's cabinet by throwing a bomb into the street.

Director General Davis received a dispatch from the state department stating that the German government had officially accepted the president's invitation to take part in the fair.

The joint Democratic caucus took only three ballots for nomination of United States senator. In each Call had fifty votes and Mayes forty-one with eight votes scattering.

In the house of commons Secretary of State for War Stanhope intimated that troops according to British custom would be used to oppose the raid by the Scots from the Transvaal.

MURDER MYSTERY.

Startling Discovery Made by a Ranchman Yesterday.

BODY FOUND NEAR MONUMENT

Evidences of a Foul Murder Bullet Hole in the Body and Evidences of a Struggle—The Coroner Is Investigating the Case.

Coroner Marlow was summoned to Monument yesterday morning by a ranchman who reported the finding of a dead body six miles west of that place. It was at first supposed that the body was that of some one who perished in the storm on the first of April, but later developments seem to show foul play.

The body was discovered early yesterday morning by a ranchman named Elkanah Shideler, as he was returning along a deserted prairie schooner's road, from fixing a fence. It was lying on its back in a small hollow near a gully. There was neither hat, shoes nor coat upon it. The body was so badly decomposed that Shideler did not attempt to remove it, but at once informed the authorities.

When Dr. Marlow arrived he carefully examined the body. It was that of a man perhaps 25 years old, with light hair and a red mustache. In his pockets were an old cob pipe and two pieces of paper. One of these was written on both sides in German, with an English address "Herman Trepton, No. 1946 Lawrence street, Denver, Colo." The other paper was a receipt from a Pueblo firm of lawyers, as follows:

MORSE & HUBBELL,
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW:
Room 11 Exchange Block.
Pueblo, Colo.

PUEBLO, Colo., March 10, 1891.
Received of Herman Bassl $15.00 on board account.
HOLMAN & CO., by
MORSE & HUBBELL.

Besides these things the pockets were empty. There was no sign of hat or shoes but the coat had been rolled up and placed beneath the shoulders. On each side of the head were lying pieces of a dead pine bough about two inches in diameter, which had been broken in half.

On removing the clothes from the body a bullet hole was found on the right side of the heart near the shoulder, coming out again behind the shoulder. No weapon was found by which this could have been inflicted.

Mrs. Shideler, the wife of the man who discovered the body, said that in January there were five tie choppers encamped in the timber where the body was found, and late in January three of these went away. Since then there had been no one in the vicinity that she knew of.

Coroner Marlow deemed the case of sufficient importance to require an inquest, and impanelled the following jury: Samuel Putnam, J. E. Smith, John Dobson, E. Inman, Joseph Biggins and W. E. Gearing. The jury was called together at 4 p. m. and after viewing the remains adjourned until Saturday.

An Atchison Charter.

DENVER, May 7.—A special from the state of May 5, has been issued by the Atchison company to the holders of the first preferred stock of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad company. Referring to circular No. 66 dated April 7, which is detailed the proposal to exchange consolidated mortgage four per cent gold bonds of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad company for the first preferred stock of that company on the basis of par with interest from January, 1890, it is stated that all holders of such stock in making the exchange will be given the same terms and no holders or class of holders will be accorded any more advantageous terms than those set forth in the circular referred to. It is further announced that the Atchison directors have unanimously voted that offer to the holders of this stock, under circular No. 66, shall expire June 1, 1891. The circular is signed by Geo. C. Magoun, chairman; and W. C. Reinhart, vice-president.

Sherman Memorial Celebration.

BROOKLYN, May 7.—Brooklyn to-night gave a memorial celebration worthy of the imperishable renown of the hero of the march from Atlanta to the sea, under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic. The large Academy of Music was filled with prominent officers, citizens and veterans of the war. Addresses were made by Chauncey M. Depew, St. Clair McKelway of the Eagle and Generals Swayne, Porter, Slocum and Howard. Emerson Brooks recited his poem of "Sherman's march," and the services concluded with the memorial service according to the ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic.

A Compromise Rejected.

VALPARAISO, May 7.—President Balmaceda has rejected the demands of the delegates from the congressional or insurgent party who have been trying to come to some understanding by which the war might be brought to a close. There is, therefore, a complete rupture in the peace negotiations. President Balmaceda has given notice of the withdrawal of bank notes, the withdrawal to take place at the rate of 10 per cent monthly. The president also demands that all import duties shall be paid in silver.

Attacking Parnell.

MONTREAL, May 7.—The Catholic clergy today renewed its attack on the Parnell party and Delegates Redmond and O'Kelly. At high mass, in celebration of Ascension day, Father Doud of St. Patrick's church, read Archbishop Fabre's pastoral and manifesto and said it was not merely exhortation, it was a command not to attend to-morrow night's meetings. Messrs. Redmond and O'Kelly are in the city and with their friends are preparing for a meeting to-morrow night.

Inter-State Oratorical Contest.

DES MOINES, Ia., May 7.—At the inter-state oratorical contest held here to-day, ten western states: Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, Colorado, Ohio, Wisconsin and Iowa were represented. Mr. Fetter, representing Indiana, won the first prize, the subject of his oration was "The Heir Apparent." The judges marked his percentage 94⅞ on thought and 87⅞ on delivery.

The Barnaby Case.

DENVER, May 7.—The grand jury continued its investigation in the Barnaby case today. Quite a number of witnesses were examined, but nothing of importance was brought to light. All of the Providence people whose names have been mentioned in connection with the case are on their road to Denver to appear before the grand jury.

A Dispute to Arbitrate.

LONDON, May 7.—A Vienna dispatch today tells of a desperate encounter between the Socialistic workingmen and the troops at Ecks, Hungary. The Socialists, made desperate by the refusal of the authorities to allow the workingmen to take in the rioting on Sunday, attempted to take the town hall by storm. The gendarmes were repulsed, and [illegible] with the loss of [illegible] killed and [illegible] wounded.

Gradually changed the mob with impunity. At first the crowd met the charges fearlessly, and succeeded in injuring several of the troops, gathering again for the attack after the soldiers had swept forward, but finally the troops succeeded in dispersing the rioters, [illegible] of whom were seriously if not fatally wounded.

Exports and Imports.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The bureau of statistics of the treasury department has issued a statement of exports and imports for the nine months ended March 31st, last, which shows the exports of merchandise to be $767,[illegible]; imports, $[illegible], excess of exports over imports, $[illegible]. The exports of gold and silver coin and bullion for the same period footed up $44,027,[illegible] and the imports $[illegible], excess of exports over imports $11,[illegible]. Deducting this sum from the excess of exports of merchandise leaves the balance of trade in favor of the United States for the nine months at $67,[illegible].

BASE BALL.

DENVER 8, SIOUX CITY 9.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., May 7.—It was ladies' day at the ball grounds today and about 1,500 people turned out to see the home team lose the second game with Denver. Extremely high wind, dust and sun made good playing impossible. The game lay largely in the hands of fortune and the blooders. The latter came near winning it for Sioux City in the eighth, when they rattled Fournier so badly that the home team scored seven runs. Weak batting and three costly fielding errors lost the game. Score:

Sioux City	0	1	0	0	0	0	7	0	0	—8
Denver	0	1	0	3	0	1	2	1	1	—9

Earned runs—Sioux City 1, Denver 2.
Two base hits—Morrissey, Werrick, Curtis.
Three base hits—Hart.
Home runs—Curtis.
Stolen bases—Sioux City 1, Denver 3.
First base on balls—Sioux City 1, Denver 2.
Hit by pitched ball—Schedeck, Scantlebury, Lohbeck.
Struck out—By Hart 4, by Fournier 6, by Kennedy 2.
Wild pitches—Hart 2.

MINNEAPOLIS—OMAHA.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 7.—Minneapolis out-batted and out-fielded the Omahas today, but still they had all they could do to win. In the second inning, with two men out and two men on bases, Shugert knocked an easy fly to Etelson. He ran for it and then concluded to let it drop without putting out his hand and both men scored. Earle put up a poor game at third, but his timely batting won the game. Shugert's work at short was perfection. Score:

Minneapolis	2	0	0	0	0	4	0	1	—	7
Omaha	3	2	1	0	0	0	0	0	1	—7

ST. PAUL—KANSAS CITY.

ST. PAUL, May 7.—Hard hitting by the visitors decided today's ball game. Score:

St. Paul	0	0	0	0	0	4	0	0	3	—4
Kansas City	1	0	0	0	5	3	2	0	0	—11

MILWAUKEE—LINCOLN.

MILWAUKEE, May 7.—The Lincoln men did most of their hitting to-day in the seventh and eighth innings, when they pounded Pitcher Vickery to the queen's taste, and got nine runs out of the two innings. They won the third straight game. The home men started in by knocking Day out of the box, but never got a smell of the ball after Burkett succeeded him, except in one inning. The visitors played a neat fielding game, making but one error. Score:

Milwaukee	1	0	3	1	3	0	0	0	0	—8
Lincoln	4	1	0	0	0	0	5	4	0	—14

Astonished by Gould.

NEW YORK, May 7.—The Sun, in its review of yesterday's meeting of the Western Traffic association, says: Mr. Gould astonished his fellow presidents by saying soon after the meeting opened:

"I have not come here to uphold any violation of the rules or to defend rate cutting. There seems to be no doubt that Mr. Leeds cut rates contrary to the rules of the association. Whether he had sufficient provocation for the act, it remains for you to determine after hearing his statement, as I presume you will be willing to do. I believe that the only way to place the association on a sure basis is to abide by the letter of its agreement, and to deal with offenders according to the rules. I have nobody to protect that is connected with the Missouri Pacific—not even myself. If any man has any charges to make against me, let him prefer them, and if they are proven I will protect the agreement by resigning from the presidency of the road."

This unusual speech from so quiet a man as Mr. Gould was received with applause, and if anything it strengthened the feeling that all offenders should be guillotined whether of high or low degree. Certainly Mr. Leeds' chances were not improved any.

The board took a recess at 1 p. m. for lunch. Before that hour Russell Sage and Sidney Dillon left the meeting and went down town.

After the recess Chairman Haghitt said the board had considered the Leeds' matter and their finding was that the Missouri Pacific railroad, through the action of the freight traffic manager, had violated the agreement substantially as presented by the commissioners.

In the afternoon it was learned that Traffic Manager Leeds, of the Missouri Pacific, had been discharged by Jay Gould and that he leaves for the west tonight. Mr. Gould, when asked about the matter, would say nothing more than that he had discharged Leeds. He referred his inquirers to that gentleman for any farther news. Mr. Leeds, on being questioned, stated that he was only to blame for the cutting, and that he did not do it under Mr. Gould's instructions. He did what he thought best for his road, and just what other roads are doing, but in a different manner. He declared that Mr. Gould had not offered him any other position, and that he intended to lay at the railroad business. At present Mr. Leeds had no plans. He did not know where he was going, or what his prospects were. It was rumored that Mr. Leeds had been offered the position of traffic manager on the Union Pacific railroad, but of this he had nothing to say.

A Unique Crusade.

ST. LOUIS, May 7.—Twenty-five thousand Sunday school children will to-day inaugurate a unique crusade. Divided into eighty parties, they will in one day make a complete canvass of the city for the purpose of ascertaining how many children do not attend Sunday school or church, and to extend an invitation to all such to visit places of worship.

H. W. STEELE,
Manager of the GAZETTE.

Road Professor James Bryce's article in next Sunday's GAZETTE on the constitutional aspects of the New Orleans lynching. It is timely and very instructive.

From the evidence now in hand it would appear that a foul murder had been committed near Monument. Every effort should be made to determine the facts in this case and secure the punishment of the assassins. It is neither safe nor right to allow such crimes to go unpunished.

The suggestion that in case the arbitration should favor the United States, Canada should pay for the seals she has stolen, is one which ought to commend itself to fair minded people everywhere. As Mr. Blaine suggests, Lord Salisbury ought to be quite willing to agree to this proposition.

It is hardly fair to hold the Italian people responsible for such insults as those which were offered to an American tourist in Florence the other day. At the same time such occurrences serve to show that Italy does not occupy a position where she can safely declaim against American mob violence, or show us a model of police protection.

Secretary Blaine's latest communication to Sir Julian Pauncefote, the English minister in Washington, is a very able paper and will doubtless have considerable effect in determining the settlement of the questions at issue. The quoting of an act by which England assumes off the coasts of Scotland rights which are very similar to those which she is disposed to deny to the United States in the Alaskan seas is a happy stroke of policy, and one which it will be difficult to reasonably oppose. However, the matter has now reached the point where it seems reasonably probable that arbitration will ensue, and the whole world will be referred to a competent and impartial tribunal.

In the entertainment of President Harrison Colorado Springs people will have a splendid opportunity both to display their patriotism and the beauties of our city. The natural advantages here are such that they serve as an excellent foundation for the work. There are fine streets and handsome lawns and long rows of houses all alike, and pretty cottages standing well apart and varying according to the means and taste of the owner. Then, too, the parks will come just at the pleasantest season of the year. The apple trees are white with blossoms, the cottonwoods are just springing into leaf the grass is freshly green as it only is in the springtime, the air is fresh and cool and in pleasing contrast the snows still lingering deep on the mountain sides. Now with all this to start with, it is evident that it will not be a very difficult matter to make the short stay of the president something that will remain upon his mind permanently, even amid all the varied features of so long and extended a trip. It is to be hoped that no one will refuse or fail to do his part in decorating his premises and otherwise contributing towards making the celebration a success.

The New High School.

COLORADO SPRINGS, May 7.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

I regret to see, from Mrs. Dunbar's letter in this morning's GAZETTE, that she has misinterpreted the sentiments of our people regarding the proposed high school building. Mrs. Dunbar speaks of reducing the size of the building as though the people demanded such reduction. I can assure Mrs. Dunbar that the great mass of the people demand no such thing. We want a fine, large, handsome structure which will be a credit to the city the people and the school board. I trust the school board will make no mistake regarding this very important matter. And one thing more, the people want their high school commenced and completed without further delay. We have voted the bonds—now we want to get something for them. Work for our mechanics, and a handsome high school for our children.

Respectfully, M. L. DuCOURNEY.

State Rights and Foreign Relations.

Ex-Secretary Thomas F. Bayard in the Forum for May.

The importance of establishing a correct principle, and the everlasting and increasing injury of connecting to an evil principle in vest this question with gravity, for it is very evident that if the government of the United States shall admit that it is liable to demands individuals directly, or a foreign government acting in their behalf for injuries inflicted upon citizens or subjects of such foreign government within the United States and in violation of its laws, and that such claimants are absolved from all efforts to obtain redress in the judicial courts, which are as open to the foreigner as to our own citizens, and where justice is administered with an equal hand to either and to both, it will create a precedent which will not merely be prolific of international discussions, but which will impair the structure of our government seriously disarrange the system of checks and balances under our state and federal systems, and confuse and destroy the essential boundary between executive and judicial powers which is one of the most important features in the constitution of our government. There is a manifest and dangerous tendency in our institutions toward central action and consolidation of power. No remedy, therefore, for alleged evils or inconveniences should be accepted that increases this tendency, for it is in the strict enforcement of limitations upon power and its determination that the best hopes, and even the life, of Free institutions of human government can be found. If, therefore, the rule of law and the arrangements for its enforcement established by our courts to be in accordance with the provisions of the constitution and adapted to the preservation of individual liberty cannot be reasonably provided by our citizens, and be acknowledged as the basis of our government, because of the presence, within our borders, of alien subjects and citizens of foreign powers whose personal wrongs may not be remedied to their satisfaction or to that of their government without the impairment and disorder of our system, then the time has arrived when the unquestionable and sovereign right of the United States to determine by positive law who shall be permitted to enter the gates and who shall be excluded must be exercised. Let us assert upon our full and honorable measure of international duty and perform it faithfully by providing and enforcing the necessary law, by compulsion but walking steadily in the path of self-imposed obligation.

The Bounty Law.

Denver Republican.

In the first four months of the present year the bounties on wild beasts which the state treasury must pay have reached the vast aggregate of more than $10,000 and at this rate it is possible that the total for the year will exceed $30,000. Most of this outlay is due to wolves in which the pelts are very scarce and it is probable that very little difference would be made in the welfare of the state if the wolves and coyotes and mountain lions and bears were let alone in those counties. It is also probable that scalps are brought in from other states to take advantage of the very liberal bounty offered by Colorado. Governor Routt should instruct the game warden to take all necessary steps to uncover any frauds that may be practiced in this matter. The late legislature should have repealed most of the bounty laws.

OUT WEST

It is said that 5000 men are now out of employment in Denver.

Boulder is greatly excited over the rumor of an oil strike on one of its farms.

The report comes from Crested Butte that the Ruby King silver mine which has been idle for some time will soon be worked.

The first work of the Denver Mercantile and Manufacturing Bureau—the establishment of the Hitchcock wooden mills has been started.

The Little Annie mine at Aspen which has been showing such flattering developments of late has been examined by Mr Wynkoop of the Denver mining exchange. The report that he will make to the committee next Friday will be made known to the public.

We have received the first copy of the Pike's Peak News, Manitou's new paper, which will be published daily during the summer months by Mr W. M. Lindsay. The paper is a four column folio and will cater to the interests of the tourist, the traveling public and those who make Manitou their temporary home during the summer months. When published daily it will rise to the dignity of a quarto.

A Pretty Garden Ornament.

A very pretty piece of ornamental gardening, not too difficult for beginners, can be done with an old umbrella or parasol and some plants of cypress vines, morningglory, sweet pea or anything that is not of too spreading a nature. Such climbers as the morning glory, canary bird vine and other twenty footers, are better left for unsightly fences and buildings. Plants are better than seed, because more certain, and they do not take so long to catch the knack of twining and spreading. Umbrella ribs are not decorative, and to see such an object standing there week after week, waiting for its clothes, does not give people a pleasant impression of a garden.

But first find your umbrella, and this may not be so easy, for "retired" umbrellas that are no longer fit for use are seldom seen. Some member of the family, however, may be able to produce one, and then it should be immediately stripped of the few tatters left to it. The next step is to paint the frame and handle brown, and when quite dry plant the end of the handle firmly in the ground, with the frame fully opened. If the handle is rather short it will be an improvement to add a piece of wood to it.

It is now ready for the vines, which should have made some progress in growing; and when they once begin to do their best the old umbrella frame makes such a lovely green bower studded with blossoms of red or purple or white, or all together if the vines are mixed, that every one exclaims over its beauty.

A parasol with the same treatment is equally pretty on a smaller scale, and it would be very ornamental in the center of a round bed edged with bright colored phlox or candytuft. With a long spouted watering pot the vines could have a daily drenching in warm weather, when the sun is not shining on them, from their roots to their highest green tips, and this would keep them fresh.—Harper's Young People.

New Use for an Old Material.

Peat, used for fuel from the earliest times, and long known to be of great value as a fertilizer, now finds so many other applications that its preparation has developed into an industry. Peat powder is serviceable, not only about stables but elsewhere, on account of its absorbent and somewhat antiseptic properties and low cost. A French surgeon introduced this powder, treated with antiseptic solutions and contained in a cloth bag, as a dressing for wounds. The idea, said to be a very old one among the working people of some places, was improved upon by another medical man of Paris. Dr Redon, who made a soft and pliable wadding of peat. Other dressings have since crowded these out of hospitals, though the peat applications are coming into use and gaining in favor among veterinary surgeons. Dr Redon's wadding has yielded important results by healing to many efforts to produce woven fabrics, so that peat is now made into matrasses, coverings, carpets, etc., which are esteemed on account of their power of absorption.—Iron.

Which Was Correct.

Two young girls who were considered bright scholars in the high school were looking over a birthday book, which was arranged alphabetically, a handsome, illuminated letter forming the heading for each page.

"I wonder," said one of the girls, "if there are just as many pages as there are letters in the alphabet or whether there are some duplicates? Count the pages and see, Mand!"

Mand turned the leaves rapidly and announced: "There are no duplicates, only thirty pages, just as there are letters."

"Why, you goose!" said Alice, "you'd better go back to primary school. Don't you know there are only twenty four letters in the alphabet?"—Youth's Companion.

A Train Problem.

It is seldom indeed that the following question is answered correctly offhand:

A train starts daily from San Francisco to New York and one daily from New York to San Francisco, the journey lasting five days. How many trains will a traveler meet in journeying from New York to San Francisco?

About ninety nine persons out of a hundred would say five trains, as a matter of course. The fact is overlooked that only by dating the journey at each train is starting from the other end, while there are five trains on the way to begin with. Consequently the traveler will meet not five trains but ten.—New York Tribune.

RIGHT TO BEAR ARMS.

IT SHALL NOT BE INFRINGED, SAYS THE CONSTITUTION

Some Interviews as to the Power of States and Municipalities to Make Restricting Laws and Ordinances—The Question a Pertinent One at This Time.

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW YORK, May 4.—There is probably no state in the Union which has not a law against the carrying of certain weapons and against carrying any concealed weapon. Even in Texas, which the world at large feels called upon to regard as the paradise of pistol shooters, there is such a law, and it is enforced to a certain extent. That is a stranger who should be found carrying a revolver in his pocket would probably have to pay a fine, though a very large proportion of the citizens of that state unconstitutionally carry them and are not punished.

In Memphis some eight or nine years ago a sort of epidemic of shooting affrays led to the passage of a local ordinance by virtue of which persons who were found carrying pistols were fined and not fined. Then a year or two afterwards a neighboring city, which went armed while traveling was accordingly sentenced to sixty days in jail and no influence which he could bring to bear was sufficient to save him from going there, though I believe he was in fact pardoned before he had been there very long.

It may be said in a general way that the laws and ordinances in the different parts of the United States are very similar, and it is therefore enough to quote those of New York. Here there are a state law and a corporation ordinance on the subject. The state law prohibiting the carrying of pistols has been repealed but section 410 of the penal code declares that any person who carries, conceals or possesses a dagger, a dirk or a dangerous knife with intent to use it against the person of another shall be guilty of felony, and the following section declares that the possession of such a weapon shall be deemed presumptive evidence of intent to use it. The offense being a felony it is, of course, punished severely, the penalty being a fine not exceeding $1,000, or imprisonment for not more than seven years or both.

The carrying of a pistol is a less serious offense, but according to the corporation ordinance it is a misdemeanor for any person, excepting judges of the federal and state courts and officers of the state and city, to carry a pistol of any kind concealed on his person and not carried openly. Provision is made for the issuance of a permit enabling a citizen to carry a pistol lawfully, but in default of such permit a penalty of ten dollars fine or ten days imprisonment is prescribed.

Just now, probably because of certain notable crimes committed by foreigners, there has been a loud call for the strict enforcement of such laws. The New York Sun the other day quoted an Italian who had been arrested and found to have a pistol in his pocket as saying that the habit of carrying weapons is universal among Italians in this country and expressed its belief that the statement is not far from true. It then referred to the state law making a felony of the carrying of certain specified weapons with intent to use them, and said: "It is collateral evidence that weapons are not borne without the intent to use them," and called on the police to arrest everybody who may be suspected of carrying them. This is in effect a demand that every Italian shall be murdered.

Now, the constitution of the United States, in the second amendment, says: "A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

To the lay mind there is an apparent conflict between this provision and the state laws mentioned, and I have consulted various authorities on the subject.

Ex-Governor Hoadly, of Ohio, who is now practicing law in New York, said that, without taking time to examine the question thoroughly, he was inclined to think that there was no conflict between the constitutional provision quoted and the various laws mentioned. "It has been held," he said, "that the constitutional provisions apply to federal legislation and to the police power of congress in the District of Columbia, and so forth. They do not apply as restricting the power of states or municipalities to pass their own laws."

"But by that you do not mean, sir," said I, "that a state can infringe any right of the citizen which is guaranteed by the constitution of the United States?"

"Of course not," he said hastily. "But this right to keep and bear arms, which is not to be infringed does not mean a right to carry concealed weapons. It means, rather, the use of weapons of warfare."

"Then a citizen may carry a revolver in a belt, but not in his pocket?"

"Well, you may reduce it to that, I suppose, but remember I am not giving you a carefully prepared opinion—only an off hand one."

Governor Abbett, of New Jersey, seemed to be by no means so sure of the constitutionality of the laws in question, though as an executive, charged with the duty of enforcing them, he would not criticise them. He refused rather brusquely to express any opinion whatever. Ex President Cleveland refused even to be seen for an interview on the subject.

Mr Hummel, of the firm of Howe & Hummel, is generally conceded to be the leading lawyer in "criminal practice," as called at the New York bar. At all events he is reputed to understand the criminal code as well as, if not better than any of his rivals. He said:

"I have given a great deal of study to the provisions of the penal code and the municipal ordinances restricting the carrying of deadly weapons, and I have no hesitation in saying that so far as they relate to the carrying of weapons used in civilized warfare they contravene the second amendment to the constitution of the United States. I have repeatedly advised my clients to that effect when they have asked for my opinion touching their rights.

"That second amendment must have been a stumbling block in the way of the lawmakers who framed the provisions of the penal code of the state, for in the enumeration of weapons the possession or carriage of which is declared a felony firearms and other weapons recognized as warlike are omitted and only those are mentioned which are universally regarded as the tools of robbers and assassins. Dirks, stilettos, sword canes, brass knuckles, slung shots, billies, loaded sticks and sandbags are placed under the ban and possession of them on the person is made a felony as it should be. I do not question that the prohibition of weapons of that character is clearly within the powers of state lawmakers. What is known as the general police power amply warrants such legislation.

It is entirely different however with the possessing and carrying of pistols and other firearms and such cutting weapons as are only adapted for use in war. Here in New York such weapons are prohibited only by ordinance of the municipality under penalty of fine and imprisonment. If a person who was subjected to such penalty should take the trouble to appeal, there is no doubt in my mind that the higher courts would declare such laws or ordinances unconstitutional.

The ordinance of this city gives the police authorities the power to grant permits to carry pistols to persons who they deem fit to be intrusted with that privilege, and I have advised those clients who have consulted me on the question that it would be easier on the whole and will probably cause trouble to obtain the required permit, and I have further advised them that if the superintendent of police should for any reason refuse such a permit they should exercise their own discretion with the full assurance that they could always easily convince the police courts to enforce the prohibiting ordinance.

Under this ordinance moreover the only persons who are actually imperiled are those who desire to give full respect and obedience to the laws. Habitual law breakers, as is perfectly well known, do not give a moment's thought to prohibiting statutes or ordinances, and when they are arrested it is usually for some offense of sufficient importance to efface the consideration of the minor misdoing."

Inspector Alexander S. Williams, who was famous as a police officer long before he was inspector is known as one of the best lawyers on the police force of this city. I asked him once, some time ago, if he believed that the laws against carrying concealed weapons were constitutional, and he said he did not think they were. "I do all I can toward enforcing the laws on this subject, the same as I do all others of course, because it is my duty to, and moreover, I consider them good laws, but I believe if any man who should be punished for carrying a pistol should appeal and should carry his case to the supreme court of the United States, such a law would be declared in that court unconstitutional."

Chief Inspector Byrnes, now acting superintendent of the police, refused to give any opinion on the constitutionality of the laws mentioned but spoke freely enough about the laws themselves. He was inclined to believe that it was illegal to carry any weapons whatever in the city of New York and that a policeman might arrest a citizen for carrying a revolver openly in a belt, but the statutes do not seem to support his opinion in this particular.

"Do you think the laws against carrying concealed weapons are conducive to the safety of the law abiding citizens in their actual operation?" I asked him.

"No I do not," he said frankly. "There is many a good citizen who would like to carry a pistol but who will not do it without a permit because of the law and who is not able and perhaps but reluctant to put himself in the position of asking for a permit. But dangerous persons always go armed. Some of them perhaps have permits, but what do they have or not makes no difference to them. Of course if it were practicable to enforce the laws thoroughly it would be different, but it doesn't seem to be.

Robert Pinkerton, the well known private detective, was asked for his opinion of the law, but was very evasive in his replies. As to the constitutionality of the laws he said, "I'd rather not speak, because I am not a constitutional lawyer. And if I should be arrested for carrying a weapon and the judge should prove to be harsh, I think I would pay my fine rather than appeal the case. Of course my men go armed a great deal of the time, but we try to keep them from it as much as possible by giving them instructions not to carry weapons excepting when they are going on some business that is likely to be dangerous.

As a rule," he continued, "I think that the magistrates, at least in this part of the country, are inclined to be very reasonable in their enforcement of these laws. For instance, I think if a reputable man had reasonable cause to suppose that he might need a weapon for self defense, and should be arrested for carrying it, the magistrate would probably discharge him after warning him of the law. It is not so in some parts of the country, however. There are places where the law against carrying weapons is regularly used as a means to blackmail strangers. Residents are never arrested for it but if a stranger comes, the porter who blackens his shoes at the hotel, the brush boy at the barber's, and everybody else who comes in close contact with him, seems to be acting as a spy. He denounces the stranger who is fined, and he gets one-half the fine for informing.

"One practical result of these laws is to keep law abiding citizens from carrying weapons, and so place them at a disadvantage in case they do happen to come in contact with criminals, for, of course, the criminals pay no attention to such laws, and good citizens are likely to. To be sure," added Mr Pinkerton, with a smile, "it is perhaps a good thing to keep law abiding men from carrying pistols, for very few of them know how to use them, and most of them would be more apt to shoot members of their own family than anybody else."

OF

Pueblo, Colorado.

One half mile west of the new Collegiate University, now in process of erection. This is one of the best residence additions to Pueblo. It lies on a direct line west of Bessemer, on high, level ground, and on a line of the city's growth. This addition is mostly owned by Colorado Springs people, and at the price they offer it, either in blocks or lots from $50 to $60 per lot, it seems almost impossible to make a mistake, as we think they are sure to double in price within one year from date.

Lillian Lewis in Credit Lorraine Last Night.

Small audiences have been the rule of late at the opera house, and the audience that greeted Lillian Lewis last evening was no exception. It seems strange that the people of Colorado Springs do not discriminate better. Let a bad [illegible] come along, made up of played out variety people, and the chances are that it will catch a few houses, but let a really meritorious company appear and the chances are that it plays to empty benches. This does not of course refer to the big stars, who are always patronized, but to companies like that seen at the opera house last night a good play and a company of actors known in the profession.

Credit Lorraine deserves to make a big hit. It is, of course, the old story of love, revenge and the attendant evils, but it is new in design, well constructed and the dialogue admirable. It is in [illegible] "emotional," touching the tragic. The action of the play is in the time of the last French empire and deals in political intrigue. "Credit Lorraine" is a stock, the bulling and bearing of which greatly affects the interests of the characters.

Miss Lillian Lewis is an actress new to this country, this being her first visit in the west, but she made a decided impression in this city. Those who expected to find in the Kentuckian another Mary Anderson in pink and white beauty were disappointed. They found instead a graceful and shapely woman, with a most wonderful play of features. Comparisons are odious, but Miss Lewis recalls her namesake and the best actress of her day—Jeffries Lewis. It is in the intensely dramatic situations that Miss Lewis succeeds best in a climax, such as a denunciation, warning, etc., but she shows good training and much skill in leading up to them. Miss Lewis exhibited some very handsome costumes in the character of "Lenora." She received a curtain call at the end of each act that was deserved.

The supporting company was the most completely rounded out in every detail that has supported a "star" in this city for a long time. The "Philippe Rameau" of Edmund Collier was well done, being a character in which a man can be exceedingly stupid unless possessed of considerable natural dignity. George Wagner's "Count de Lusignan" was admirable. Mr. Wenell is a frequent visitor to Colorado Springs and his work is always good. A character new to the stage, a paralytic spy, is introduced in the play and was a fine bit of acting that Frederick Moule did as "Jacob Lustig." The "Madam Bonbon" of Helen Beaumont deserves a good mention, and also others of the cast.

It is to be hoped that a large audience will greet the company should it visit this city again.

TO PROTECT THE WIVES.

Bill of Interest to Persons Interested in Humane Acts.

The report of the meeting of the humane society yesterday morning in the GAZETTE was read with interest by many persons. The fact that the society has a good cash balance on hand was hailed with pleasure, as it gives the officers an additional power. When they prosecute a case any threat they may be compelled to make about appealing is idle when backed by money. The [illegible] should be even larger, as it might be wiped out any day by a law suit.

Secretary Thompson, of Denver, spoke of a bill that had been introduced in the legislature, looking to the protection of wives and children. That such a bill was introduced was news to many persons, and we print it for their benefit. The house bill No. 92, introduced by Mr. Voorhees, entitled "An act to compel support of wives and children." It reads as follows:

"Be It Enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Colorado:

"Section 1. Every person who shall unlawfully neglect or refuse to support his wife or children shall be committed to the county jail and sentenced to hard labor for not more than sixty days unless it shall appear that he is prevented by physical inapacity, or other good cause, be be unable to furnish such support; provided, That in case of conviction for the first offense the court before which said conviction is had may, in lieu of the penalty herein provided, accept from the person convicted a bond to the board of county commissioners of the county in which such conviction is had, with good and sufficient security, conditioned for the support of the wife, child or children, as the case may be, for the term of six months after the date of such conviction; and the court may accept such bond at any time after such conviction, and order the release of the person so convicted.

"§ 2. Any justice of the peace of the county in which the offense defined in the foregoing section is committed may, upon complaint being made under oath, as now required by law, issue a warrant for the arrest of any person charged with such offense; the justice of the peace before whom such person is brought under such warrant shall hear and determine the cause; Provided, The accused may have a trial by jury of six [illegible] jurors, or if he shall insist upon a full jury of twelve, who shall be summoned to try the cause; and if the jury shall find the defendant guilty they shall fix the term of his imprisonment.

RECEPTION NOTES.

Organizations or others wanting places in the parade are requested to report to Marshal Dana at once.

No warrant has been drawn and paid by the city treasurer for the contribution made by the city council.

The organizations which take part in the parade Monday are not expected to be in the line of march laid out for the day. They will do but little marching.

No parade occurs in the evening.

It has been arranged that after arriving at the hotel the visitors will be given an opportunity to rest and get dinner. At 8 o'clock in the evening the president will speak and a general reception follow.

The committee meets this evening at the residence of Captain De Courcy to [illegible] at the handsome book of views intended for presentation to Mrs. Harrison. The book is too delicate to stand much handling and will be exhibited at a block only.

The executive committee in charge of the presidential reception met yesterday morning, and will continue to meet at 10 o'clock each morning until the arrangements are completed. The meetings are held in the directors' room of the First national bank. The committee has arranged that all bills contracted shall be vouched for by the chairman of the sub committee and approved by the executive committee.

The executive committee have found it necessary to curtail the route previously announced for the line of march, owing to the limited time they will have for the parade. The line will be as follows:

From D & R G station east on Brown to Tejon; south on Tejon to Vermijo, east on Vermijo to Nevada; north on Nevada to Willamette, east on Willamette to Wahsatch, north on Wahsatch to Monument; west on Monument to Nevada; north on Nevada to San Rafael; west on San Rafael to Cascade, south on Cascade via College to the Antlers. This route is definitely established by the committee.

List of Jurors.

District court will not open until Tuesday on account of the presidential reception, and the fact that there will be very little business to attend to on Monday. The following are the lists of jurors summoned for the term:

GRAND JURY.

He Came to Time.

A big man and a little man had a war of words on Congress street, west, the other day. The big man dared the little man to tackle him for a rent or any other sum of money which he might care to put up, but the latter answered:

"No, sir! I will bide my time! I can wait!"

"Going to hit me with a brickbat some dark night, are you?"

"No, sir! I shall take a manly revenge."

"Write a letter to my girl, eh?"

"No, sir! I am going to California. When I get there I shall box up a stone weighing about twenty pounds and send it to you by express, C. O. D. It will cost you about fourteen dollars to pay the charges."

"But I won't receive it."

"Oh, yes, you will. Curiosity to know what is in the box will be too strong for you. You'll take it quick enough, and my revenge will be complete."

"See here, old fellow," remarked the big man after a moment's thought, "I was too fast. I have wronged you, and I beg your pardon. Let's shake and make up!"

—And they shook. Detroit Free Press.

He Knew the Enemy.

It is related that at a recent sham battle a young lieutenant, posted with his company behind a wall, ordered his men to fire at a detachment of troops who were marching by.

The guns were loaded with blank cartridges, and no harm was done; but the detachment happened to be on the same side of the sham fight as the company which had fired at it.

The commanding officer came riding up.

"Why did you fire at these men?" he demanded of the lieutenant hotly.

"I supposed they were the enemy," said the lieutenant.

"And what led you to suppose they were the enemy?"

"Because my tailor was at the head of them, and I saw my butcher in the ranks. What else could I suppose, sir?"

A PRACTICAL JOKER.

Some of Perkins' Harmless but Amusing Tricks Which He Perpetrates.

Perkins is tall, angular and a practical joker of the severest type. One of his peculiar pleasantries is to suddenly halt a strange, pompous individual on the street, buttonhole him and remark with cool assumption:

"I beg your pardon, sir, but I think you have made a mistake."

"What is that, sir?" the victim is likely to ask.

"Well," Perkins will reply with the utmost audacity, "this city does not belong to any one man or set of men. You may think you own it, but you don't. See?" and Perkins will hurry away, leaving the pompous man to his own reflections.

Sometimes he varies this interesting performance in the highly original fashion: Stepping up to a total stranger he will ask for a light for his cigarette. This trifling favor having been extended, he will engage his victim in conversation for a moment. When another stranger appears Perkins hails him. As he approaches Perkins introduces him to the first man.

"Ah, Mr. Smith, permit me to present you to my friend, Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown, Mr. Smith."

Of course the men shake hands and Perkins takes his departure, leaving the strangers to extricate themselves from their embarrassment as best they can.

One day Perkins entered a small east side dry goods store with a friend. Ranged in front of the counter were a row of stools. Upon these the men seated themselves. In a moment a dapper young clerk came up and asked Perkins what he desired. For an instant he seemed puzzled for a reply, but soon his eyes rested upon the familiar sign "If you don't see what you want ask for it." That furnished him with a clew.

"Well," he said in measured tones, "you can bring me a plate of corned beef hash, nicely browned, with two poached eggs on top; also a cup of hot coffee. What's yours, George?" he added, turning to his friend.

"Gimme the same," he responded.

All the girls in the store stared hard at the impudent fellows, and the clerk's eyes began to bulge.

"Gentlemen," he replied, with a show of calmness, "you have made a slight mistake; this is a dry goods store and not a restaurant. Do I look like a waiter?"

"I am not here to answer questions, young man," said Perkins, as with his friend he rose and moved toward the door, "but if you can't fill orders you'd better go out of the business or take in your sign."

And the jokers vanished out the door. Perkins is still at large.—New York Herald.

Two Stories About the Bible.

According to a story now current in Washington clubs, Commander Schley of the navy received among his boyhood Christmas presents a handsome Bible from a rich aunt. After a moment's reflection, they say, he exclaimed: "I'm up to that dodge," and began examining the volume carefully leaf by leaf—until he reached the Sermon on the Mount, where he found a ten dollar bill pinned to the page. This is no better story than that of George Hayward's gift of a big Bible to the old city club.

In the presence of witnesses he put a ten dollar bill in the book—at what chapter is not stated. The volume lay on the center table in the reading room. At the end of a year, in the presence of the same witnesses, Mr. Hayward opened the Bible and found his ten dollar bill just where he had left it. There was nobody in that club who was "up to the dodge" which young Schley penetrated so promptly. Buffalo Courier.

The Mushroom.

It is commonly believed that the mushroom literally grows in a night, so that it has come to be emblematic of sudden development, but the truth is quite otherwise. It is very likely to require several weeks for its formation, and up to the time of its appearance in the light of day it remains beneath the surface, very much compressed and held in small compass. Then comes a moist night, and the cells of which the fungus is composed are greatly expanded, so that it thrusts itself out above ground. But it is no heavier, though so much bigger, than days before, perhaps, when it lay hidden in small compass under the top layer of soil, a perfect mushroom.—Washington Star.

SPECIAL VESTIBULED CAR FOR COLORADO SPRINGS.

One of Pullman's latest and finest sleeping cars is set out at Colorado Springs by the Santa Fe route daily, for the accommodation of Colorado Springs patrons. This car is taken on by the Chicago train leaving at 7.35 p. m. Reservations may be secured at city office in Opera House block. The public are invited to inspect this car at the Santa Fe depot. They are positively the finest coming into Colorado.

EASY AS A CRADLE.

Each vestibule sleeper on the Santa Fe Route "Cannonball" train between Denver and Chicago is as easy as a cradle. Chair cars, library cars and day coaches are arranged with conveniences that satisfy the most fastidious traveler. No prettier, swifter or more comfortable train has ever cut a hole in the night.

A NEW ROUTE EAST.

The Wabash Line is now running its Cannon Ball train from Kansas City to Toledo, vestibuled; leaving Kansas City at 6.30 p. m., making direct connections with all trains from the west at that point.

Free reclining chair cars and Pullman buffet sleeping cars from Kansas City to Toledo, at which point as well as at Fort Wayne and Delphos, direct connection is made with all the limited trains for the east, southeast and northeastern points.

E. at Pueblo, May 7 and 8, also a rate of one fare for the round trip to all who wish to attend the president's reception at Denver

Mr. Fred F. Horn, lapidist, and Mr Cahn, came home smiling from a short prospecting trip last night. They state that they did not find gold. Mr Horn carried something in his vest pocket that it would take considerable gold to buy There is much more mineral wealth in the vicinity of Colorado Springs than the majority of people are aware of

The harness which is to be sent to Denver, to be used on the horses drawing the president's carriage, is now on exhibition at the harness and carriage repository of E. F Wellcs & Co., who are the makers, on North Tejon street The harness is a very handsome one, and the three sets will cost the purchasers, the proprietors of the Windsor stables of Denver, $600. It is hand stitched throughout, and has brass trimmings and dressing done by hand upon the box loops. Silk rosettes of red and olive green decorate the bridles. The collars will be white and the reins of russet leather Upon the black horses that are to draw the president's victoria, the harness will make a very handsome appearance.

Please Decorate

The committee on exterior decoration urgently request the citizens generally to decorate their homes with flags, bunting, etc., on the occasion of the visit to our city of the chief executive of the nation, especially on the line of march as designated by the executive committee.

J F. Humphrey
Chairman Committee.

Short Shrift.

One of the leading banking firms in Paris, on the recommendation of a London correspondent, engaged an English clerk of the name of Stephenson For about three years the man's punctuality was altogether unprecedented He came to his work at 9 in the morning and did not leave the office before the last stroke of 5. He was not a man he was a clock Besides, during the whole time he never asked for a holiday One fine morning, however, to the great surprise of his superior, Stephenson blushingly craved permission to absent himself for an hour on the following day

Next day at 12 he left the office. It was observed that a carriage stood waiting for him at the door At 1 o clock he drove up again in the same carriage and resumed his calculations as cool and self possessed as if nothing had happened This short absence puzzled the brains of all the employes in the bank The principal himself, eager to obtain the solution of the enigma, invited this paragon of clerks to dinner Between two glasses of Chambertin the banker said, You will not think me indiscreet if I ask you what you did with yourself in that hour s leave of absence you applied for last Tuesday"

"Oh! dear no!" replied Stephenson I went and got married! —Messager Boltenz.

Insulted by a Woman.

"Oh, yes, I'll remember Detroit, no fear about that," said sweet voiced Dora Wiley as she rocked to and from an easy chair in the Russell House. "I shall remember it as the first place in which I was really insulted, and by a woman too."

"How and when did all this happen?" asked the reporter.

"One night this week," continued Miss Wiley in reply, "A woman sat in one of the boxes with her back to the stage. One could bear that sort of thing for a little while, but when an auditor turns his or her back squarely on you for a whole evening you cannot drive from your mind the impression that an insult is intended. Well, that was the feeling that came to mind as scene after scene of the play went by, and still that woman sat there

"I became so annoyed—exasperated I might say—that I could hardly sing at all It affected others on the stage the same but perhaps to a less extent The legitimate result of course was to take our minds off our work to a certain extent and to a certain th audiences suffered by the acts of that one woman although, perhaps they may not have noticed it"—Detroit Journal

Cheap Funerals in New York

A Hester street undertaker says Funerals don't come very high in this neighborhood but such as they are the poor people seem to have trouble paying the bills. I furnish what is considered a respectable funeral for $5 50 but that does not include any carriages. The coffin and the hearse attendance is all that I can give for the money The people in this neighborhood are mostly Polish Jews and Greeks, who are nearly all very poor, and $5 50 represents a small fortune Only a few of them in my experience have ever expressed any objection to having their dead buried in Potters field but they all are superstitious and superstitious about the funeral and will sacrifice almost anything to obtain a coffin and hearse

"They seem to have no idea of the value of our money A woman whose husband died the other day came to me with a brass ring, which she thought I would take in exchange for a coffin She was very much surprised when I refused her and offered to work for me for a year if I would only give her husband a decent funeral. He was finally buried at the expense of the city"—New York Letter

Diamond Smugglers Devices.

"Diamonds are smuggled into this country by a good many strange devices," remarked a voluble customs official the other day "Not long ago I examined the baggage of a newly arrived tourist and found in it a beautiful set of silver mounted brushes. Curiosity prompted me to lift one I heard something rattle and investigated, with the result that I found over $7 000 worth of stones concealed in the backs of these brushes. Another individual had the heels of his boots hollowed out and fitted with a drawer which he filled with diamonds. One day one of the heels came off and disclosed the hiding place of a number of valuable jewels."—New York Telegram

A Botanical Curiosity.

At a meeting of the Royal Botanical society the secretary brought to the notice of members a portion of a large poplar lately blown down in the gardens, showing a network of roots running almost round the trunk, between the bark and wood, at some distance from the ground. The plant had apparently derived its nourishment not from the soil, but from the decaying portions of itself. —Pall Mall Budget.
